COVID-safe construction comeback

In line with recent NSW Government announcements, redevelopment construction has recommenced and our builders are back on the tools. Works on the new clinical services building and refurbishment of existing spaces are progressing, and our builders are working closely with the redevelopment project team and hospital staff to ensure measures are in place to keep everyone safe.

To continue works on the first dental clinic at Campbelltown Hospital, our builders have installed an access door directly to their work site to remove the need for construction staff to enter the hospital. To ensure construction of the new space remains on track for opening in early 2022, essential drilling and pipework are underway to enable fitout of the dental clinic, including the installation of specialised dental chairs and equipment.

At times, construction requires demolition. The next stage of works within our pathology area are currently underway, with demolition making space for additional services and an additional cool room. This expansion will ready the pathology service to support the opening of the new clinical services building.

Although there are reduced numbers of workers on site, the new building continues to advance to completion. The spectacular outside of the newest building to join the hospital campus will be complemented by a stunning inside, so stay tuned for further sneak peeks of the internal fitout in the coming months.

CP1 works extended

Due to the recent COVID-19 construction pause, works within the hospital's P1 car park have been extended until approximately mid-March 2022. The P1 visitor car park is currently restricted to emergency vehicles, public bus services, renal dialysis patients, accessible (disabled) parking and patient drop-off. Alternative parking is available in the nearby P2 car park and other visitor car parks across campus.

Admin hub staff with artist Geraldine Dela Cruz's artwork 'Fishes under the sea'

Talented local artists featured in new hospital display

Nine artworks from the 2020 Fisher's Ghost Art Award are adding vibrant colour to Campbelltown Hospital's new administration hub, one of the first areas completed as part of the $632 million stage two redevelopment.

Staff visited Campbelltown Arts Centre at the time of the annual exhibition to select the artworks for purchase, which include five pieces from local artists. One of the works Fishes under the sea was developed by Artist Geraldine Dela Cruz during the start of the pandemic last year. Inspired by the sacrifices and contribution made by frontline responders, this piece is placed at the reception area and provides a vibrant welcome for staff and visitors.

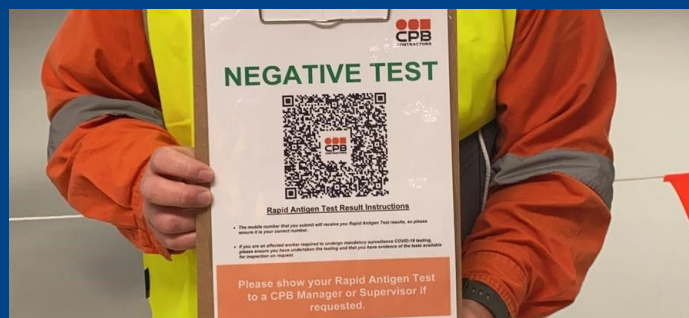

The arts is an important part of the hospital's redevelopment planning, supporting the health and wellbeing of staff, patients, consumers and visitors. The redevelopment team continues to work with Campbelltown Arts Centre to foster a sustainable partnership between the health and arts sector and we look forward to revealing more artwork and installations that will feature in the new clinical services building in coming months.

Quick COVID-19 testing on site

Health Infrastructure is working closely with builders CPB to rollout on-the-spot Rapid Antigen Testing within the construction site for the new clinical services building. Complementing mandatory vaccination, this pilot program will ensure quick and easy access to testing for hundreds of construction workers.

Providing results in minutes, this screening tool will assist in detecting COVID-19 in people who may not have any symptoms, helping to boost the safety on site and provide an extra layer of protection for our authorised workers and the community.

Thank you to all our workers on site for their support as we progress with construction.

ICT easy as 1,2,3

Our Information Communications and Technology team certainly make hard work look easy. ICT is the infrastructure and components that enable modern computing and is a large body of work in setting up a new building and connecting a range of medical equipment. From patient monitoring systems to nurse call buttons, the installation and management of key networks in the hospital contributes significantly to improved health outcomes for patients and provides more efficient ways of working for staff.

With the structure formed for the new clinical services building, the team are now looking over the plans for the space to make sure the necessary cabling is in place to power equipment, set up servers and get connected to the network.

Working closely with facility staff and the project's Furniture, Fittings and Equipment (FF&E) team, our ICT team has a vast range of connections to be made. The recent focus has been on ensuring a smooth move into the new space for the Pathology Lab team – making sure computers are talking to printers and equipment is working as it should be.

Technology has the potential to make a major difference to the care of patients and is a big part of the planning for the redevelopment project. Our ICT team are working to make sure the new building is a smart building, ensuring all systems are networked with adequate security and high availability.
